Setting up an analog & digital TV tuner in Windows 7 Media Center

The WinTV-HVR-1600 was used for this example, but any other Hauppauge WinTV-HVR can be set up in the same way.

Note: if you are using the built-in IR receiver in the WinTV-HVR-1850 or the WinTV-HVR-2250, please run HCWCIRConfig first before you setup Windows Media Center. When you run HCWCIRConfig, select ‘Hauppauge Consumer Infrared Receiver’. If you do not, Windows Media Center will stop at the step where it is “looking” for a Media Center remote control.

Step 1: Open Windows Media Center. Click Continue.

Step 2: In the Get Started screen, choose Express.
Step 3: Choose TV/Live TV setup.

Step 4: Your region will get automatically detected. Choose yes to continue if it is displayed correctly, and click next.
Step 5: Enter your zip or postal code when prompted, and click next to continue.

Step 6: Program guide terms, choose ‘I agree’ and click next to continue.
Step 7: TV set up will indicate that it is downloading program data.

TV setup will then examine TV signals
TV setup will then indicate your TV signal detection result. If detected correctly, choose ‘yes configure TV with these results’ and click next to continue.

Step 8: TV set up will now ask you to set up analog cable, click next to continue.
Step 9: Choose your analog cable TV provider and click next to continue:

Step 11: Choose your digital cable TV provider and click next to continue:

Step 12: TV setup configuration will confirm your signal setup, choose next to confirm:
Step 13: TV setup will now require you to download your TV program guide.

Step 14: After the program guide data has completed, TV setup will begin a TV channel scan process. This can take several minutes.
Channel scan will complete and display a list of the channels found (digital QAM). Choose next to continue.

Step 15: TV signal setup will indicate that it is finished. Click Finish.
Step 16: Return to the main menu, and choose TV, and click Live TV to begin watching TV.
